

Talking to Classmates

"I'm generally quiet and reserved. I don't play or watch football, and I'm not obese. I am American and I guess even though I do not know much Chinese, maybe I would consider Chinese as part of my cultural identity too."

Your classmates look awkwardly at each other and silently nod.

The Flyer

By the time the next week rolls around, you notice that your classmates are less eager to talk to you once they realize you're very different from the typical American they had in mind... Oh well...

During lunch, you see a flyer for a Cultural Club meeting, set for tomorrow afternoon.

Do you go to the meeting?

I guess it's worth giving a try

No.. I'd be so different from those who are actually Chinese
