

Talking to Classmates

A girl steps in and says, "My name is Sheng, my English is fairly good out of the class. I can help you translate."

You politely reply, "Great, thank you!"

You are bombarded by questions from classmates: "Are Americans all loud?" "Do you regret not learning Chinese?"

What do you think of their questions to you?

Answer their questions

Kind of offending.. You don't want to keep socializing with them

The Flyer

Unwilling to try and find the confidence to continue trying to practice your Chinese speaking skills and confront students' questions, you carry on with classes.

During lunch, you see a flyer for a Cultural Club meeting, set for tomorrow afternoon.

Do you go to the meeting?

I guess it's worth giving a try

No.. I'd be so different from those who are actually Chinese
